DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
Mount Airy is located on the south side of Mt. Airy Road, approximately one fourth mile west of the intersection of Mount Airy Road and Davidsonville Road. The house is approximately three fourths of a mile north of Davidsonville, Maryland and two and one half miles south of U.S. Route 50. Mount Airy is a two-story cube brick dwelling erected in the late 1850's by the Iglehart family. The structure stands on a high basement, and is covered by a low-pitch hip roof. Chimneys rising from the interior of the house help to enclose an observatory platform on top of the house. The cornice around the eaves on four sides is formed of bricks with a dentil effect. Standing on a ridge amid tall trees, the ground slopes in three directions to deep ravines and distant tobacco farm lands. Behind the house a flower and vegetable garden is terraced into four gentle falls of open ground. The interior ceilings on both floors are eleven and one-half feet high. An unpainted frame smokehouse near the garden has a notable batten door mounted with large strap iron hinges. The door is abundantly studded with large rose-headed wrought nails. The entrance door is sheltered by a formal Doric portico. Double entrance doors open into a wide hall running through the center of the building to a stair. A pair of spacious parlors open from the left, and a dining room and kitchen open from the right. There are four large bedrooms upstairs. Recent partitions erected in several rooms adapt this bright, airy, nineteenth century home to contemporary living.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
Mount Airy represents not an innovation but rather a continuation of a Georgian-Federal style: a square brick block with a central hall plan and a white columned portico. During the 19th. century the tidewater tobacco culture dominated the economy of Anne Arundel County as it had during the eighteenth and even the seventeenth centuries, it is not unusual that vernacular architecture followed traditional forms. The builder of Mount Airy continued the architectural tradition of his predecessors as he continued their agricultural way of life. The quasi-Greek Revival detailing on Mount Airy is indicative of a vernacular style directly associated with the nineteenth century. The Greek elements provide a time reference which places the home in the proper chronological setting. The school house on the property provides additional evidence of the tobacco culture. In rural areas from the colonial period to the 20th. century the planter's children received their education at home in school houses similar to the one at Mount Airy. For thirty years a French tutor, Monsieur Le Loup, educated the Iglehart children. He was replaced by the eldest daughter, Agnes Iglehart. Mount Airy was an active social center as was common for a large house in the rural South. The frequent parties, including an annual Christmas ball, brought visitors from the surrounding area and from distant points, Baltimore and Washington. Maria Iglehart, the wife the builder James Alexis Iglehart, was responsible for the gardens at Mount Airy. Widely known for her horticultural abilities she always referred to plants by their Latin botanical names. She (see continuation sheet)
